About the Presenters

Ruth Aguilar has over eighteen years of combined experience advocating for people with disabilities. She holds a B.S. in Psychology from the Illinois Institute of Technology and Professional Graduate Studies in Non-Profit from Harvard University. Ruth's professional experience stems from working previously in an ISC Agency and then as a Self-Directed Assistant serving the community with intellectual and developmental disabilities. Moreover, with her personal expertise as a mother of a teen girl with Rett Syndrome and a Seizure Disorder, Ruth brings a wealth of knowledge to families by assisting them in obtaining services and understanding their options by being assertive, yet professional. Ruth is inspired by her husband and her daughter to be a servant leader who helps those around her without hesitation.

Anita Barraza, OTR/L, is a proud parent of two young adults with disabilities, Diana and Danny. Anita is also an occupational therapist by profession. Anita is a strong advocate for her own children as well as for all the students and families she services. Anita has learned to navigate the world of disabilities to be able to support her children in their journey. She believes parents of children with disabilities have to be their children's voices. Anita strongly believes that learning about transition process, resources and benefits for her children is key for them to have a strong support system. Anita loves to share and encourages other families to do the same both in her personal and professional roles.

Ronnie Cohn began her career around the time that the first class action lawsuit was initiated on behalf of people with developmental disabilities who were living in a deplorable institutional setting. Ronnie also been consulted on eight other class action suits in six states: evaluating services in both institutional and community settings; assisting in transition planning; developing and implementing protocols for compliance reviews; training service coordinators; working with advocacy groups and quality assurance entities; developing systemic plans; and spending time with individuals who receive services to determine whether or not all of the efforts by consistently well-meaning professionals and others are actually benefiting those for whom we all work.

Kimberly Johnson is a disability/legislative advocate, and grassroots community leader, who believes in leadership through systems change, creating, pursuing goals, and achieving a vision of shared values about people living with disabilities. Professionally, Kimberly works as a Regional Coordinator (Cook County), at the Community Residential Services Authority (CRSA). This position provides technical assistance to families, service providers, educators, and other professionals to help plan and implement appropriate, effective services for children with severe emotional disturbances and/or behavior disorders (SED/BD), in Illinois. Most importantly, Kimberly is the devoted mother of an adult son living with Autism, speech, and cognitive delay and gained her lived experience through their journey navigating support services in Chicago and the surrounding suburbs of Illinois.
